Caxton Press, Bangalore, 2000—6--10.

Extract from G.O."P.No.889 Revenue dated 27th March 1910" of the Government of Madras.

The Government consider that the carcasses of all animals which die of infectious disease on the road should be buried at the cost of Government in view of the danger of spreading disease by handing them over to persons claiming to be the owners. The amendments to paragraph 5 section 42 (Cattle disease) of Chapter V, of the village officers' Manual proposed by the Board are accordingly approved subject to the omission of the words' and the owner of the animal is not known ' occurring in the last part of paragraph 5 (11).

Letter No.608 dated 19th May 1911 from the Inspector of Cattle Diseases in Mysore to the Revenue Commissioner in Mysore.

With reference to the steps taken by the Madras Government for arresting infection from carcasses of animals that die in the road side from infectious disease, I have the honor to state that the method suggested will be effective only if carcasses are buired with skin entire in places away from grazing grounds and even from water courses in pits 6 feet deep with one foot lime both beneath and above it, otherwise the burying of animals in shallow pits as is done in most cases not only tempts the village chamars to exhume the body for the sake of hide but will also be a souce of great danger to village cattle even when no fresh infection is brought from outside. The other method viz cremation, though a little bit more costly will be more thorough and will destroy infection especially in Anthrax and Black -quarter in various stages of spore formation. If this is practicable, ground plan of temporary field incinerators will be submitted for approval early.

SIR,

With reference to ~~to~~ correspondence ending with this office letter No. 1934, dated the 18th August 1911, regarding the disposal , at Government cost, of the carcasses of animals dying of infectious diseases on the road, I have the honor to forward herewith copy of letter No. 140, dated the 23rd August 1911, from the Inspector of Cattle Diseases in Mysore on the subject.

2. From a practical standpoint, cremation appears to be a more convenient, speedy and effective method than burying, especially in villages, and as the Cattle Disease Inspector points out, the average cost in either method is almost the same.

3. I would therefore recommend that the system of disposing ~~of~~ by cremation, at Government cost, of the carcasses of animals dying of infectious diseases on the road may be brought into force into Mysore.

4. The allotment of Rs 500/- required by the Cattle Disease Inspector for the purpose, for the current year, may be sanctioned. The amount will have to be met by a special grant.

Letter No. 140 dated the 23rd August 1911 from the Inspector of Cattle Diseases in Mysore to the Revenue Commissioner in Mysore.

With reference to your letter No. 498/vet. dated 12/14-7-1911 regarding the relative cost of burying and burning carcasses of infectious cases, I have the honour to state that the cost of digging a pit 6 x 6 Ft. and filling it up with lime 2 Ft. deep will be more or less the same as in cremation. In the pit system the villagers can easily command labour but may not be able to procure the necessary quantity of lime in time, whereas in cremation there is less labour and the cost of firewood may not exceed the cost of lime and the average cost of each case may approximately come to ₹5/-. As this method of disposal of carcasses is in an experimental stage, ₹500/- may be allotted during the current year. I have also submitted for favour of information a sketch of the ground plan of a field ~~incinerator~~ incinerator.
